

REFLECTION

This semester's CEW to say the least was disappointing. Not because the events were terrible but because we were not able to attend any of it except for the Praise Jam. This was caused by the suspension of classes due to Typhoon Kristine. This was very unfortunate cause I was really looking forward to attending in some of the college convocation. From last year's experience, I really wasn't that much ecstatic on attending any convocations at all but surprisingly it was quite the experience for me as I enjoyed listening to the speakers' words and of course I can't forget the mini Praise Jam at the start and at the end of the convocation. For the Praise Jam, it was the only event that got rescheduled so that students can still join and enjoy it. I didn't really stay for too long during the Praise Jam just like last year but I've seen some photos from other students and my classmates enjoying the event so I guess that it was very fun. This is just about all I can comment about the CEW this semester. There were some unforeseen interferences that hindered the event from happening but all in all it was still enjoyable for some. Hopefully next semester, we can now get a proper and complete CEW so that I can join some convocations.
